LOCAL / CLASSIFIEDS

"The arts council is the way for grass roots people to make known their cultural desires," was the way Jan Wolfe, one of the charter members and a consultant for arts agencies in Texas, termed the purposes of the organization.

Charter members of that first PCCAC were Mike Richardson, who was chosen as president, Paul Raymond Mayben named as vice president, Judy Jackson approved as secretary, and Gladys Cloyes chosen as treasurer.

A board of directors for the organization was named, to consist of Margaret Brown, Mignon Thomas, Dr. Robert Pendergrass, Jo Taylor, Gladys Cloyes, Judy Jackson, Mandy Nickerson, Ann Reeves, Tom and Carolyn Franks, Mike Richardson, Kris Vickery, Camp County Judge Larry McCasland, Pittsburg Mayor Dave Abernathy, and Paul R. Mayben. Robert Long was named an ex-officio member of the board in charge of publicity.

Over the years, many Pittsburg citizens have been a part of the Arts Council including James Wallace, Kay Green, Deb Porter, Linda Grundish, Randy Cline, and James and Elizabeth Whatley just to name a few.

But after the completion of the Whatley Center for the Performing Arts at the Northeast Texas Community College, the local Arts Council declined and was more or less disbanded.

But the mosaic opportunities were brought together again in recent years, and the PCCAC is now growing once again, striving to remain true to its purpose: to bring any kind of art to the area. This includes music, painting and drawing, even the culinary arts.

"We need people in the community who can take the reins and develop opportunities in other disciplines," President Sabin Warrick explained.

One of the community members who has indeed taken the reins in the realm of theatre is Sheila Brown, Director of Theatre. Discovering this interest in high school and carrying it with her through college, Brown is now a member of the Theatre Longview and Winnsboro Center for the Arts as well.

Originally thinking she wanted to be an actress, Brown then started critiquing other's plays, and discovered that she wanted to make the attempt at directing.

The Christmas play "It's a Wonderful Life" performed in December 2021, was her director debut, and she found she loved it. "I liked the stage managing, costumes, everything," she said. "I guess I never grew out of dress-up," she smiled.

The PCCAC has several ideas in the making including theatre camps. Warrick explained the goal of the PCCAC is for local people to entertain the local community, while still enjoying some of the well-known productions on the stage. "It's a lot of work," he said, as the organization is based entirely on volunteer efforts.

April N Smith gave a performance during the Arts Council's re-creation in 2021, and some of the theatrical productions since then have included Pittsburg's Got Talent, Music on Market, Talent Search, and It's a Wonderful Life.

Steel Magnolias, the newest production, will be showing in Pittsburg on July 22-24, and they have also been asked to perform in Winnsboro on July 29-30.

For those who wish to become involved with the Pittsburg-Camp County Arts Council, individual memberships are $35, business memberships are $50, and students are invited to join for free. Sabin Warrick or Sheila Brown can be contacted for more information.

Softball fever grips state of Oklahoma

Berry Tramel

The Oklahoman | USA TODAY Network

NORMAN, Okla. – Two hours before first pitch Friday, the line of people stretches about 150 strong, beyond the left-field wall of Marita Hynes Field in Norman. The heat has risen to the mid-80s, and Oklahoma Sooners softball fans are not happy.

“It’s 2 o’clock,” they yell at the ushers waiting to scan tickets and check bags. “They’re letting people in.”

Indeed, around the corner, another gate at the home of Oklahoma softball has opened, which means some fans already are scrambling to the general admission bleachers beyond the outfield. Sooners, if you will.

Don Grace, a 10-year Oklahoma season ticket-holder from Watonga, has been waiting in line since noon to make sure he gets his desired spot, at the top of the bleachers in left-center. Good news: Grace indeed staked his claim for Oklahoma’s super-regional opener against Central Florida.

Grace describes himself as a donor, with season ticket seats in the main grandstands for the regular season, but those aren’t guaranteed for the NCAA playoffs, so he usually gets dispatched to the bleachers.

Grace doesn’t mind too much. “I like sitting here,” Grace said. “I just don’t like waiting two hours to get it.”

Softball fervor has gripped the state.

The top-ranked Sooners are a runaway hype machine, both nationally and locally. Patty Gasso’s squad likely is the second-most popular team on campus, at least judging by internet metrics. Oklahoma reached the Women’s College World Series by sweeping Central Florida, capped by a 7-1 victory Saturday.

Meanwhile, the Oklahoma State Cowgirls also are bound for the World Series, having completed a two-game sweep of Clemson with a 5-1 super-regional victory Friday night in Stillwater, where Oklahoma State had its own ticket-demand issues.

It’s a common refrain in Oklahoma. USA Softball Hall of Fame Stadium hosts the WCWS this week for the 32nd time in 33 years, courtesy of a variety of expansions and renovations that now gives the iconic venue a capacity of 13,000. Sellouts are the norm for the tournament that starts Thursday.

In Norman, Marita Hynes Field, which opened in 1998, lists a capacity of

Oklahoma State softball players celebrate with fans after beating North Texas in the NCAA Stillwater Regional on May 22. SARAH PHIPPS/THE OKLAHOMAN

1,520 but jammed in 1,659 Friday.

Relief is coming. Oklahoma is expected to break ground this summer on Love’s Field, a few hundred yards south of the current stadium.

“Long overdue,” said Oklahoma fan Nancy Howard of Norman, who managed to get a $75 all-session ticket for the super regional but often struggles to find a way into the park. She’s paid as much as $60 for a regular-season game, using the resale market.

Oklahoma softball mania is rising rapidly. The Sooners hosted four games over three days at Hall of Fame Stadium in March. They drew 4,718 on a Friday night for Indiana; 4,936 for Saturday games against San Diego State and Houston; then 3,246 for an 11:30 a.m. Sunday game against Iowa.

“Great problem to have,” said Toby Baldwin, Oklahoma’s director of compliance and the administrator for Sooner softball. “Softball sellouts are becoming a regular thing around the nation.”

The Sooners were a phenomenon far beyond state borders this season. Fans climbed trees to see them play in California and watched from parking garages in Hawaii.

The softball fever has spread to Stillwater, where the same symptoms are found: overflow crowds, waiting lists for season tickets, a need for a new home.

“We’d love for them to have a new stadium,” said Jennifer Hamilton, an Oklahoma State fan from Broken Arrow who drove over with her husband to watch the Cowgirls play Clemson. They were part of the crowd listed at 1,384. The Hamiltons spent a year on a waiting list before securing season tickets at Cowgirl Stadium, which including standing room accommodates only about 1,265.

“These are high-class problems,” said Jesse Martin, Oklahoma State’s senior associate athletic director for external affairs.

Oklahoma State, like Oklahoma, has worked to accommodate the demand with a variety of innovations. Standing-room only tickets. A free festival beyond the outfield walls, where fans can watch the game on a big screen, partake of food truck options and hear the sounds from the ballpark while mingling with others on the wrong side of the ticket demand. And while Oklahoma has resorted to ticketed bleachers within the park and just beyond the outfield walls, Oklahoma State has gone to virtual party decks, which have become quite popular and from which fans can good-naturedly (hopefully) interact with opposing outfielders.

Martin likens the atmosphere at Oklahoma State softball to the intimate feel of old Gallagher-Iba Arena, with everyone close and everyone engaged. “It’s almost like ‘Cheers,’” the TV sitcom from decades ago. “Everybody knows your name, and they’re glad you came.”

But Oklahoma State knows the ultimate answer is the same answer found in Norman. A new stadium.

The Sooners’ Love’s Field will seat 3,000, with the capacity to expand and pack in more when demand arrives. It’s not crazy to believe the Sooners could have sold 8,000 tickets for the super regional closeout game Saturday.

Oklahoma State has plans for a new stadium, with the likely location just south of Cowgirl Stadium, where baseball’s abandoned Reynolds Stadium sits deteriorating.

“We know we need this,” said Oklahoma State coach Kenny Gajewski, who has the Cowgirls in their third straight WCWS. “We have a lot of people that just don’t come now, because they know it’s impossible to get inside.”

Gajewski knows a new stadium is at least a few years away and knows relieving the ticket demand is going to be incremental.

“Just baby steps,” Gajewski said. “It’s hard, because you don’t want to invest too much, knowing you’re going to be tearing this thing down. But you gotta keep going until that time. It’s kind of the cost of doing business here.”

Kind of the cost of doing softball business anywhere. The sport is exploding. On ESPN. In ballparks. With marketing.

It seems quite likely that softball’s fan bonanza is not a fad.

“I think softball across the board has done a remarkable job of catering to their audience,” said retired Oklahoma administrator Kenny Mossman, who spent many years overseeing Sooner softball and now pastors the First Baptist Church of Carnegie. “It’s never gotten too big to interface with the little boy or little girl. Always communicated openly with their fan base.”

Mossman recalls the common sight at the World Series, where even members of the losing team join an autograph session for fans. You don’t see that out of Kentucky or Duke basketball at the Final Four.

“Who else does that?” Mossman said. “The TV numbers are very good. That’s usually a precursor for how well a sport’s going to do ... the sport’s still growing. Don’t know that we can pinpoint where it will land.”

Of course, Patty Gasso is not always going to have a team for the ages. Gajewski’s Cowgirls aren’t going to the World Series literally every year.

The ticket demand might fade. But it hasn’t faded at the World Series, which has a national following and a festive atmosphere and long lines for everything from getting into the park to signing autographs to buying roasted corn from the food trucks.

Be on time, World Series ushers. Softball fans are watching the clock.

Gretzky loves ‘fun’ TNT NHL studio show

Chris Bumbaca

USA TODAY

Don’t expect The Great One to be working from the broadcast booth much in the future.

Wayne Gretzky loves his day job – as an analyst on the “NHL on TNT” studio show alongside Rick Tocchet, Anson Carter, Paul Bissonnette and host Liam McHugh – that much.

“We have a lot of fun on the panel,” Gretzky said on a conference call with reporters Tuesday. “We really enjoy being together. It’s fun to have chemistry right off the bat.”

Since he retired in 1999 as the NHL’s all-time leading scorer – along with dozens of other records he still holds – Gretzky has missed playing.

He realized long ago he wanted to give his life to the game and saw the Turner gig as an opportunity to stay connected, which he appreciates – from the parity between teams to the stars’ skill level to the direction of the league.

His friendship with Charles Barkley, a panelist on TNT’s “Inside the NBA” who spoke highly of the Turner Sports

Hockey legend Wayne Gretzky says a push from his friend, Basketball Hall of Famer Charles Barkley, helped push him into a broadcasting career.

CHUCK BURTON/AP

team, also pushed him into the role.

“Probably, he was underrating it,” Gretzky said. “It’s an even better and nicer group than I could have imagined. It’s kind of a fun atmosphere to be in.”

Everyone brings something different to the program, Gretzky said, whether it’s a quip from Bissonnette or a breakdown from Tocchet. Most important, they all get along.

“We can debate each other. We can argue with each other. And once we leave the studio, it’s over and done with,” said Gretzky, who welcomes the conflict. “It’s good not to always agree with each other. I think that’s part of what’s made it fun.”

Gretzky and his studio mates are on site for the Western Conference finals, which started Tuesday in Denver with the Colorado Avalanche defeating the Edmonton Oilers 8-6. He said he’s ready to travel, but not at the rates of TNT broadcast analysts Darren Pang, Keith Jones and Eddie Olczyk.

“Their jobs are safe,” Gretzky said. “That’s not for me.”

So while one GOAT (Tom Brady) has post-retirement plans involving the booth, Gretzky appears content in the studio.

An empty-nester, Gretzky moved to Florida to be close to his three grandchildren who live there. It’s also an hour flight to Atlanta for the TNT show.

“(Broadcasters) work a lot harder than any of us on the panel,” Gretzky said. “Trust me.”

Bissonnette ‘an incredible story’

Tocchet and Gretzky were teammates later in their careers with the Los Angeles Kings and had remained friends. That was key, Gretzky said, because it helped the other three realize he’s “one of the guys.”

That’s especially true of Bissonnette, the quintet’s edgier wild card who befriended Gretzky’s sons while playing for the Arizona Coyotes. He entered the media field once his playing days ended, hosts a hockey podcast for Barstool Sports and now sits next to Gretzky once a week (and more often during the playoffs).

Gretzky called Bissonnette “an incredible story” whose career essentially began once he retired from the game thanks to hard work and a passion for hockey.

“Obviously, he’s off-the-cuff,” he said of Bissonnette. “But he’s a smarter hockey person than I think people thought going into this year. He knows the game. He respects the game, and I can’t say enough good things about him.”

11 THINGS PHIL SAID

‘Opportunity ... to have most balance’ in life

Adam Schupak

Golfweek | USA TODAY Network

Phil Mickelson made his first public comments Wednesday since joining the Saudi-backed LIV Golf International Series.

While he sat on a stage alongside his fellow teammates of “Team Hi-Flyer” that he picked the night before during a player draft, Mickelson answered every one of the 26 questions during their group presser.

Mickelson has been in self-imposed hiding since February when his controversial statements on the PGA Tour and Saudi Golf League were published on the Fire Pit Collective.

Here are 11 things Mickelson addressed during his news conference Wednesday ahead of LIV Golf’s debut event today near London at Centurion Golf Club.

Phil’s take on “sportswashing”

“I said earlier, I don’t condone human rights violations. I don’t know how I can be anymore clear. I understand your question, but again, I love this game of golf. I’ve seen the good that it’s done and I see the opportunity for LIV Golf to do a lot of good for the game throughout the world and I’m excited to be part of this opportunity.”

Pressed further, he added, “Nobody here condones human rights violations, and nobody here is trying to make up for anything.”

Why did he sign with LIV Golf?

“I’ve really enjoyed my time on the PGA Tour. I’ve had some incredible experiences, some great memories. I have a lot of strong opinions on things that should and could be a lot better. One of the mistakes I made is voicing those publicly. So, I will really make an effort to keep those conversations behind closed doors going forward. I think that’s the way to be the most efficient and get the most out of it.”

What exactly he is apologizing for?

“I understand that many people have very strong opinions and may disagree with my decision, and I can empathize with that. But at this time, this is an opportunity that gives me a chance to have the most balance in my life going forward and I think will do a lot of good for the game.”

Is he banned from the PGA Tour?

“I choose not to speak publicly on PGA Tour issues at this time.”

Will he play in the 2022 U.S. Open?

“I will play next week at the U.S. Open. I’m looking forward to it.”

Why he won’t resign his PGA Tour membership

“It’s because I earned it. I believe all players should have the right to play whenever or wherever they want, which is consistent with being an independent contractor. As a lifetime member, I’m not required to play 15 events. I don’t have to play any; I can play one. So, I don’t feel the reason to give that up.”

Future role in the Ryder Cup?

“Just like the PGA Tour, the Ryder Cup has provided so many relation-

Phil Mickelson said Wednesday, “I choose not to speak publicly on PGA Tour issues at this time.”

About that four-month absence

“I’ve had an awesome time. I had a four-month break from the game that I have not had from the game in over three decades. I have had an opportunity to spend time with my wife, Amy, a bunch and travel to parts of the world and spend time at a place we have in Montana skiing, and hike in Sedona (Arizona), what a beautiful place that is, and it’s given me time to continue some of the work and therapy on some of the areas that I’m deficient in my life and given me time to reflect on what I want to do going forward and what’s best for me and what’s best for the people I care most about.

“This is an opportunity that allows me to have a balance where I can still be more present and be more engaged with the people I really care about and that’s why when I think about being part of LIV Golf I feel so good about it.”

Is LIV Golf all about the money?

“I don’t necessarily agree with your premise, but I think that the opportunity that it provides me to play, compete, bring the sport throughout the world, play less, and have a better balance in life on and off the golf course. I know that it gives me a lot of positives personally and professionally, and I believe it does the same for everyone else in the field.”

Did he actually get a $200 million sign-on fee?

“I feel like contract agreements should be private. But it doesn’t seem to be that way.”

DeChambeau will play LIV Golf event in Oregon

Adam Schupak and Riley Hamel

Golfweek | USA TODAY Network

LIV Golf reportedly is expected to announce that two more former major winners and top-ranked players are expected to join its ranks, perhaps as soon as its next event.

Bryson DeChambeau, the 2020 U.S. Open champion, has agreed to play in the next LIV Golf Series event in North Plains, Oregon, at Pumpkin Ridge Golf Club scheduled for July 1-3, his agent confirmed.

“Bryson has always been an innovator,” agent Brett Falkoff wrote in a text to Golfweek. “Having the opportunity to get in on the ground floor of something unique has always been intriguing to him. Professional golf as we know it is changing and it’s happening quickly.”

The John Deere Classic, where DeChambeau won his first PGA Tour title in 2017, is the PGA Tour event being held the same weekend as the LIV event in Oregon.

DeChambeau, No. 28 in the world, made his return to the PGA Tour last week at the Memorial Tournament. He missed the cut, shooting 9 over through the first two rounds.

He’s been dealing with multiple injuries, but wrist surgery had kept him sidelined since the Masters (where he also missed the cut).

On Feb. 20, DeChambeau shot down the notion he was going to leave the PGA Tour for the Saudi-backed rival league spearheaded by Greg Norman.

“While there has been a lot of speculation surrounding my support for another tour, I want to make it very clear that as long as the best players in the world are playing the PGA Tour, so will I,” he said in a statement.

On Wednesday morning, Patrick Reed, who withdrew from the RBC Canadian Open on Tuesday, became the latest name reportedly in talks to join LIV. The 2018 Masters champion is expected to be added to the roster of LIV Golf Series players, according to the Telegraph.

Reed, in contrast to DeChambeau, has never come out in support of LIV Golf or dismissed the idea of ever making the move. It appears he’s made up his mind.

Reed is a nine-time winner on the PGA Tour and ranked No. 36 in the world. However, the last year has been tough for the 31-year-old. Since his solo fifth at last year’s Memorial, he’s finished inside the top 10 just twice in 26 official PGA Tour events.

This week, LIV’s opener is being played in London at Centurion Club. Phil Mickelson made his return to the spotlight and Dustin Johnson had his first press conference since joining the league where he announced he has resigned his PGA Tour membership.

The Pumpkin Ridge event is the next on LIV Golf’s schedule, then a few weeks later, they’ll be in Bedminster, New Jersey, at Trump National Golf Club Bedminster.
