Kelli O'Hara rings in 2015 merrily — at the Met

Waltzes into debut at her 'dream' venue

Elysa Gardner
@ElysaGardner
USA TODAY

NEW YORK In 2014, Broadway star Kelli O'Hara earned her fifth Tony Award nomination playing a woman torn between responsibility and passion in the musical The Bridges of Madison County. She'll ring out the year in a role that's decidedly lighter in tone.

On Wednesday, New Year's Eve, O'Hara makes her Metropolitan Opera debut in the premiere of a new production of Franz Lehár's 1905 comic operetta, The Merry Widow. Directed and choreographed by another Broadway veteran, Susan Stroman, the staging features Renée Fleming in the title role, a woman who has traveled from Pontevedro (a stand-in for Montenegro) to Paris with an envoy hoping to secure her a match to keep her late husband's wealth in their country. O'Hara plays Valencienne, the ambassador's wife, who attracts another man's attention in the meantime.

Performing at the Met has "been a goal and a dream of mine for years," says O'Hara, chatting in her dressing room at Lincoln Center during a rehearsal break. The actress, 38, received her bachelor's in music from Oklahoma City University, focusing on opera, and several of her musical-theater performances, including those in Bridges and 2005's The Light in the Piazza, have showcased her classical prowess.

O'Hara is respectful of the differences between the forms. "I understand very well why it's not considered "for years," she says.

Singing at the Met has been a goal of O'Hara's "for years," she says.

she says. For starters, performers in contemporary Broadway musicals have the luxury of being milked. "That doesn't have to be a crutch," but in opera "your voice does need to have as much power as it can on the stage and you have to be as present as you can."

She also credits Stroman, one of a number of leading theater directors recruited at the Met under general manager Peter Gelb, with making the transition to the Met's grand stage seem natural. "The rehearsal room feels very familiar," she says. "What Susan is doing that is so magical here at the Met is she is using every single person as an individual... So every dancer has a trick, and every chorus member is waltzing. There's movement; there's a different story going on in every corner of the stage."

Widow wraps its run Jan. 31, but O'Hara won't be away from Lincoln Center for long. On March 12, she begins performances there in a new Broadway revival of The King and I, helmed by Bartlett Sher, who directed her in Bridges and in Lincoln Center Theater's acclaimed 2008 revival of another Rodgers and Hammerstein classic, South Pacific.

"I think it's going to be grand and wonderful and hopefully what everyone wants it to be," O'Hara says of King, in which, she notes, she'll play another "strong woman."

For now, though, her focus is on making Merry into the new year. "It's so celebratory," she says. "I think it's a perfect fit for this occasion."

Here comes the 'Mentalist' finale

Patrick Jane (Simon Baker) and Teresa Lisbon (Robin Tunney) are looking for a happy ending.

For 'The Mentalist's' Patrick Jane (Simon Baker), Teresa Lisbon (Robin Tunney) has gone from colleague to fiancée. The couple, in a photo exclusive to USA TODAY, tie the knot in an outdoor wedding in the CBS drama's two-hour series finale (Feb. 18, 8 p.m. ET/PT).

"It was sweet. It was vulnerable and touching," Baker says. "It was very personal, that moment where he turns in the field and sees her, just the two of them alone."

Tunney, accustomed to seven seasons of Lisbon's more practical on-the-job wardrobe, "felt uncomfortable wearing high heels and a dress. But it was beautiful," she says. "I feel the finale is a departure. It's like 'The Mentalist' giving you their greatest version of a romantic comedy. I think it totally works."
