Overview

IHT is the national leader in education specific heart rate technology and student wellness assessment software. Our products integrate into health and wellness curricula, including helping students - including those with special needs - learn emotional self-regulation through school behavioral health efforts and in trauma informed practices. IHT is also used in physical education classes (online and in school), and we impact academic growth through our kinesthetic learning program in STEM programs. Our software centralizes all data from unlimited individuals, daily-to-yearly from K-12, with robust reports that link emotional and physical health, allowing teachers, school counselors, and administrators the ability to individualize instruction for each child, while aggregating all data together into one place. Daily reports can be sent to parents and students.
