Lochte Takes Aim at 5th in Olympics

Tommy Birch
The Des Moines Register
10/18/20

DES MOINES, Iowa — Swimming star Ryan Lochte still has plenty he wants to accomplish in his athletic career.

He prefers to keep the majority of his goals to himself. But he can’t hide the most obvious:

“Those are my goals — the goals that I want to accomplish in my swimming career,” Lochte said. “So I’m going to keep that to myself and keep everyone guessing. The most important one, I think everyone knows, is to want to make my fifth Olympic team.”

Lochte is in the middle of that quest.

He’s in Des Moines this week competing in the TYR Pro Swim Series at MidAmerican Energy Aquatic Center at Wellmark YMAC. Lochte is one of more than 300 swimmers expected to compete in 28 events from Wednesday through Saturday.

Lochte, a swimming legend with Olympic medals, 27 World Championship medals and a total of 90 medals in major international competitions, is one of the event’s biggest headliners. And for good reason.

“The spotlight has been shining on Lochte in and out of the pool for years. He’s not just a decorated swimmer but also the sport’s most Coleman figures as a real-life star.”

During the 2016 Olympics, Lochte was at the center of an international controversy when he falsely claimed he and said he and several other Americans had been robbed while in Rio de Janeiro. Lochte later apologized for lying about the incident, leading USA Swimming to suspend him from domestic and international competitions for 10 months.

Lochte was suspended again in 2018 for 14 months for using a prohibited substance.

Lochte says he’s grown from the controversies.

“I’ve grown dramatically,” he said.

Lochte says he’s grown from the controversies.

“I’ve grown dramatically,” he said.

Lochte said the trip to Des Moines plays a pivotal role in her journey back to the Olympics, emphasizing the need to gear up for 2020 Games just around the corner.

“This is a good test,” Lochte added. “We have a couple more meets between now and the Olympics, but each meet is a good marker and a good chance for what we can take forward on to the next couple of months. It’s kind of a good launching point into the next block of training.”

Lochte, who has been training hard in Florida, said she was anxious to compete.

“It doesn’t matter how hard you train in practice,” Lochte said. “Practice is just practice. When you go to a swim meet, it matters about racing. And the more racing you do, the better you can prepare for the Olympics. It’s really exciting for anyone that can get on those blocks and be a part of it. But it’s even more exciting for me. I’m really, definitely looking forward to getting back into it and into the racing mode.”

While Des Moines won’t make or break any Olympic plans for competitors, it should be a solid — and entertaining — show for swimming fans, offering a possible preview of the some of the events in Tokyo this summer.

After hearing so much about Des Moines, Lochte said he’d pumped to finally experience it.

“I’m definitely looking forward to go to Des Moines and get some quality racing in and have some fun,” he said.

Fast Pool Lures Lochey, Olympians to Des Moines

Tommy Birch
The Des Moines Register

Des Moines’ debut event last year was a resounding success for the city and the pool, which opened its doors in 2020.

“Last year was a very special and unique year,” said Ryan Murphy, one of the event’s biggest headliners. Murphy has been training in Des Moines, Lochte added.

LeVelle Moton has a 109-125 record in 10 years as head coach at North Carolina Central. PETER CARROLLTON TODAY SPORTS

For an industry that loves to send knightly young guys up against the tanks, somewhere before they’ve proved anything on the court, it’s somewhat puzzling that LeVelle Moton is still at North Carolina Central. Moton, 45, is already responsible for the best record in basketball for the historically black university joined Divi- sion I, having won the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference tournament four times with a possible fifth this weekend.

Even some of his former players are surprised he hasn’t panned that suc- cess into a higher profile. “We thought he was going to leave going into my senior year because we came off such a great year and he showcased himself and was in a hot commodity,” said Jordan Parks, who was part of North Carolina Central’s first NCAA tournament team in 2014. “He’s a phenomenal coach. But it’s hard to say because he has a strong bond with the university being an ex-player (at NLUU), being from Raleigh and doing all the things he’s done. He wants to do cul- ture-shifting things. He’d love to take N.C. Central and break that stigma of being just an HBCU basketball pro- gram.

But there’s another factor to Moton’s longevity at N.C. Central beyond just loyal fans. Out of the 62 Division II coaches at a public university with a basketball contract, USA TODAY Sports reports for its annual pay data on college basketball coaches, Moton is one of only seven annually paid $225,000 or less through the 2020-21 season.

The average salary for extended Moton’s contract out that far after an- other NCAA tournament bid last season are likely easy to explain. North Carolina Central is often viewed as a “haves” program with any coach or administrator to dis- cuss Moton’s contract. (Moton) does not want to draw attention to the details of his contract,” spokesman Kyle Serba wrote in an email.

These details, however, are both public and relevant in un- derstanding how a small school that competed in Division II until 2007 has retained a uniquely successful coach with job security that goes far beyond what his peers have been able to obtain.

After being elevated to head coach in 2009, he signed an eight-year contract on April 11, 2014, following the program’s first NCAA tournament appearance. It was extended in 2017 for an additional three years, increasing his guaranteed salary from $250,000 to $288,000. But this time, it included a clause that Moton would automatically have a year added to the end of the contract (up to three years total if N.C. Central won ei- ther the MEAC regular-season or tour- nament title. Finally, N.C. State sweet- hearted Moton’s deal again last spring af- ter its third straight MEAC tournament title, extending the deal through 2020-21 with the same potential three-year rol- over provision. Because of the Eagles’ regular-season title, which means he will begin the 2020-21 season with 11 years remaining on his deal with a total of $3.975 million in salary guaranteed.

That level of commitment is justified, according to former players Kyle Benton, who has already made could pay off if it total number reaches $250,000. Last year, under slightly different contract terms than he has in his new deal, that payout to Monto- ton totaled $44,244.58.

The long-term commitment Central has already made could pay off if it keeps evolving around more years. “He just knows what he’s doing,” Parks said. “He knows who’s going to win, who fits into his program. He’s not always look- ing for the best player, he’s looking for the one who can contribute a lot and he’s shown what he’s there for. I really think he has a few steps ahead of the other programs where he just knows how to get it done and what it takes to win. I truly believe he can do it as long as he wants to, not just prove it at the current level.”

It’s often a challenge for a coaches at HBCUs to get attention from schools in higher-level conferences, largely be- cause the number of guarantee games they have to play to make their budget dictates their record. This season the Eagles started 20-10 playing against the likes of Georgia, Louisville and Westford before proving themselves as MEAC’s top team with a 1-3 league record.

Few know that really as well as Cy Alexander, who won a combined six MEAC tournament titles at South Caro- lina State and Howard before retiring in 2010. Alexander inter- preted the economics of coaching years that would have paid him more money and given him a bigger platform but al- ways found himself as the runner-up in those matchups. He wonders if the same stigma has been attached to Moton.

“I don’t think he lies a lot of sleep because he hasn’t gotten that opportu- nity,” Alexander said. “If some point maybe you say to yourself, ‘I can’t. I keep winning championships and make him- self at my alma mater and I’ve taken care of my family real well.’ That’s what happened with me, and at some point maybe you think, ‘I can’t. I keep winning championships and make him- self at my alma mater and I’ve taken care of my family real well.’ That’s what happened with me, and at some point maybe you think, ‘I can’t. I keep winning championships and make him- self at my alma mater and I’ve taken care of my family real well.’ That’s what happened with me, and at some point maybe you think, ‘I can’t.

It can be so frustrating that it happened with me, and at some point maybe you think, ‘I can’t. I keep winning championships and make him- self at my alma mater and I’ve taken care of my family real well.’ That’s what happened with me, and at some point maybe you think, ‘I can’t. I keep winning championships and make him- self at my alma mater and I’ve taken care of my family real well.’ That’s what happened with me, and at some point maybe you think, ‘I can’t. I keep winning championships and make him- self at my alma mater and I’ve taken care of my family real well.’ That’s what happened with me, and at some point maybe you think, ‘I can’t. I keep winning championships and make him- self at my alma mater and I’ve taken care of my family real well.’ That’s what happened with me, and at some point maybe you think, ‘I can’t. I keep winning championships and make him- self at my alma mater and I’ve taken care of my family real well.’ That’s what happened with me, and at some point maybe you think, ‘I can’t.

But it does deserve that opportunity because he doesn’t have a great fortune and a genuine high-level Division I college basketball coaching pedigree, and he’s proven that with the success he’s had.
