Camp CAD Appraisers will begin field work.

The Camp Central Appraisal District is beginning its field appraisal work in certain parts of the county for the 2022 year.

The Appraisal District divided Camp County into three regions for the purpose of reappraisal. Region 1 covers properties within the city limits of Pittsburg and properties along Lake Bob Sandlin. Region 2 covers properties north of Highway 11 (with the exception of properties in Region 1) and Region 3 covers properties south of Highway 11. Properties in Region 3 are scheduled for inspection for the 2022 tax year.

The re-appraisal plan requires an on-site property inspection at least once every three years, and the CCAD conducts its reappraisals according to the regions listed

With the number of properties to be seen, appointments are not made. Camp County has great neighbors that look out for each other, and word will get around when the staff is in a particular neighborhood.

Appraisers will not ask to enter homes, but will go to the door to make anyone who is there aware they are on the property if they need to measure a new structure or remeasure an existing one.

Each appraiser is required to carry appropriate identification listing their TDLR issued number and a photo ID issued by the district. In addition, field appraisers will have "CAMP CENTRAL APPRAISAL DISTRICT" signs on their vehicles with the district's phone number.

Property owners are encouraged to contact the CAD office at 903-856-6538 to confirm an appraiser's identity if there is any question.

The appraiser has a checklist for each property, which includes measuring or remeasuring structures. In addition, based on the field manual, appraisers are to "ensure correct classification, condition and depreciation of all structures; identify if there are any additional issues regarding the structures or the land; ensure correct leveling and identifiers on manufactured homes"; and take a current photograph if necessary.

The appraiser will NOT be able to discuss the value of the property. Valuations are based on sales information and cost schedules that are applied later in the year. At this point, the appraiser is gathering information and performing visual inspections, not setting a value. Exemption applications are not available in the field, but will be mailed to you upon request or when property's ownership changes.

The staff works diligently to gather accurate information, however, with locked gates or pets, some dimensions may be difficult to confirm in the field. The appraiser will then estimate the measurements using the district's mapping system.

Each year, new construction, permits and requested rechecks are done, but property in the Reappraisal Zone must also be completed. There is a strict timeline to accomplish this task and the field staff will need to move quickly to be completed by March. Plans call for completing the reappraisal zone by the first week in February, and then start rechecks and permits.

Please feel free to call the CAD office or come by anytime you have a question or concern about your property.

into becoming the true core of this team.

Nashville Predators: Can Juuse Saros continue to carry this team in net?

Juuse Saros will, once more, have the herculean task of carrying this Predators team to a playoff spot. After putting up a 9.88 save percentage in 67 games played – the most of any NHL goalie last year – Saros proved himself to be a more than capable replacement for Pekka Rinne in Nashville.

Saros' task will definitely be made easier if Matt Duchene

Saros' task will definitely be made easier if Matt Duchene has another outstanding year, Eeli Tolvanen takes another step forward and the Predators offense rises to the occasion. But if the goaltender misses significant time or can't stay consistent, the Predators may be be in trouble.

New Jersey Devils: Has their goaltending finally been fixed?

After a revolving door of goaltenders last season – seven in total – due to injury, the Devils enter the 2022-23 season with Vitek Vanecek and Mackenzie Blackwood as their netminding duo. Blackwood must be better for the Devils to stand a chance, as his .892 save percentage in 25 games played last season is a far cry from his .918 save percentage in his rookie 2018-19 year.

Vanecek, meanwhile, must

Vanecek, meanwhile, must continue to be consistent in his debut with his new team and hopefully, for everyone's sake, stay healthy if Blackwood fal-

New York Islanders: Was last year just a fluke?

It seemed unthinkable that the islanders would start the 2021-22 season 9-12-6 and eventually lose head coach Barry Trotz after getting to the Eastern Conference final in back-to-back years. Lane Lambert will have a lot to prove as a rookie head coach but the overall structure is still there for this team to make a splash in the Metropolitan Division. Thankfully this time the Islanders won't have to start the season playing IS games on the road to finish construction on their new arena.

New York Rangers: Will Igor Shesterkin sustain his Vezina-winning level from last season?

Shesterkin was an absolute beast for the Rangers last year. Winning the Vezina Trophy with a 36-13-0 record and a 9.35 save percentage, Shesterkin was the driving force behind the team making the Eastern Conference final. Given how tight the East is overall still this eason, the Rangers' success will no doubt lie at the feet of Shesterkin once more, and if he falters, so too will the team.

The Panthers landed an exceptional player in Matthew Tkachuk but also gave up a lot. REBECCA BLACKWELL/AP

Ottawa Senators: Is their new look enough to elevate them into a playoff spot?

The Senators made a lot of moves this offseason. The team offloaded Matt Murray to Toronto and used that space to sign Giroux and acquire Alex DeBrincat from Chicago. The team's beefed-up offense is the scariest it's been in some time, yet in a division with the Maple Leafs, Lightning, Bruins and Panthers, the math just might not be there for Ottawa unless the Senators can prove they can hang with the top teams in their division.

Philadelphia Flyers: Can John Tortorella save them from themselves?

John Tortorella is a good hockey coach. The Flyers are a bad hockey team. It sure looks like it's going to take a miracle on Tortorella's part to whip the Flyers into shape and turn them into a playoff contending team given their gutted roster and numerous injuries even before the season begins.

Pittsburgh Penguins: Can their aging core get them

The Penguins surprised many after re-signing Evgeni Malkin, Kris Letang and Bryan Rust this past offseason. Much of the greater Pittsburgh area believed it to be an impossible task for general manager Ron Hextall, but all three have been re-signed to once more make a Stanley Cup run with Sidney Crosby.

While always in the mix, the Penguins haven't made it out of the first round of the playoffs since 2017-18. Though their core may be restored, the clock is ticking on this aging Penguins group to make one last push before this era closes forever.

St. Louis Blues: Which Jordan Binnington will we see next season?

Last season, Binnington went 18-14-0 with a .901 save percentage in 37 games played, spending a good portion of the year riding the bench for Ville Husso. With Husso in Detroit now, Binnington will have a chance to take back his net this season as long as he plays more like his two previous seasons of average play than last year's sub-optimal performance.

San Jose Sharks: Is this team's core truly cooked?

The Sharks have had a rough go of it in recent years. After making it to the Western Conference final in 2018-19, San Jose's been shut out of the playoffs for three seasons straight.

Tomas Hertl, Logan Couture, Erik Karlsson and Marc-Edouard Vlasic are all one year older and all haven't played up to their potential these last few seasons.

The Sharks are a long shot for a playoff spot, but the 2022-23 season could be a good chance to gauge if this team's core still has juice left in them.

Seattle Kraken: How big of a step forward will they

While many criticized the Kraken's expansion draft choices that led them to finish 30th last season, the team did end up drafting Shane Wright thanks to their poor performance in their inaugural year.

The Kraken still have a long road ahead of them to become a competitive team, but it's hard not to be excited about what they're building with Wright and Matthew Beniers as the pillars of their forward corps.

Tampa Bay Lightning: How does the team respond to its first Finals defeat in three years?

The Lightning nearly threepeated as Stanley Cup champions in June before falling short to the Avalanche. It's been some time since hockey fans have known a team other than the Lightning sitting at the top of the world and it's been some time since Tampa Bay has known defeat like this.

With most of the Lightning's usual suspects returning – outside of Ondrej Palat and Ryan McDonagh – Tampa Bay will have the firepower to make it back to the Stanley Cup Final even in a tough Eastern Conference. If they're still lingering on last season's Stanley Cup loss, however, the road may be just a bit harder for them.

Toronto Maple Leafs: Is this the year, for real this time?

How many times can the Maple Leafs ask themselves this question ahead of a new season? After another disappointing Game 7 loss in last season's playoffs, Toronto is facing yet another year of high expectations and high ramifications if they fail to meet them.

The biggest change for the Maple Leafs is the loss of Campbell in net, with Murray and Ilya Samsonov set to battle it out for the No. 1 spot. We know how good the Maple Leafs pieces are individually, it's just a matter of them finally putting them all together when it matters most.

Vancouver Canucks: Does the team get the Bruce

Boudreau bump after a full

The Canucks were an abject disaster to start the 2021-22 season. Vancouver started 8-15-2 before Bruce Boudreau was brought in to save the season. Afterward, the Canucks played at a 106-point pace, well enough to get them into a playoff spot had they had Boudreau at the reins for a full year.

And now, the Canucks will

And now, the Canucks will have Boudreau for a full season, unless disaster strikes once more. Vancouver has a lot of good pieces who have had flashes of greatness and now is the time for Boudreau to get everything he can out of this team.

Vegas Golden Knights: What does a full season of Jack Eichel look like?

In 34 games played last season with his new team post neck surgery, Eichel posted 14 goals and 25 overall points for the Golden Knights. Vegas missed the playoffs for the first time in franchise history last season, but in a weak Pacific Division, the Golden Knights should be able to get back to form this year as long as injuries don't rampage through the team again. A fully healthy Eichel as the team's No. I center also should do wonders for this Golden Knights team.

Washington Capitals: Does Alex Ovechkin have another 50 goal season in him?

The 2021-22 season was the ninth time Alex Ovechkin posted 50 goals or more in a single year. Now just 114 goals behind Wayne Gretzky's record of career goals, Ovechkin continues to defy the aging curve at 37 years old. While Ovechkin's pursuit of Gretzky's record likely still isn't in sight for another year or two, he remains the centerpiece of the team as the Capitals' leading goal scorer by more than a mile last season.

Washington is an aging bunch and the Capitals will need Ovechkin to continue to work his magic if they want to stay in the hunt for a Stanley

Winnipeg Jets: Can the team's leadership group pull themselves together?

Blake Wheeler was stripped of this six-year captaincy in Winnipeg over the summer, signaling a change in the air of how the Jets plan to do business going forward. For some time now, the Jets dressing room has been a divided bunch and it really came to a head last year when the team failed to make the playoffs for the first time since 2016-17.

With a new head coach in Rick Bowness and leadership group, we'll have to see if the Jets can put the pieces together to get back into the postseason.

"We remain committed to rooting out racism wherever it is found," the school said.

She also pointed out that some white people used the investigation to attack anti-

"There were many white people who concluded in the aftermath of the investigation that the charges were all a hoax,' and have suggested that the out-come confirms their belief that concern about racism at BYU is overblown," De Schweinitz told USA TODAY Sports via email. "They are using this incident to further attack anti-racism initiatives at BYU.

"That's been super discouraging for many in the campus community. Some black students worry that their experi-ences with racism at the university are ences with racism at the dimershy are now more likely to be written-off, and that 'rooting out racism,' as the school has recently pledged to do, will take a back-seat to other priorities." De Schweinitz also said she would have liked to have seen a statement at the end of the BYU investigation that appeared less defensive. But she said she appreciated the university taking steps to investigate the matter. "I was really pleased to hear about the conversations that BYU's athletic director. Tom Holmoe, had with members of Duke's team, his strong condemnation of racism and expressions of racism, and to see that he, and the University, have put in place some new practices designed to address racist and unsportsmanlike behavior among fans at home games – things like pre-game announcements and videos that pro-mote anti-racism, and a hotline for reporting racist incidents," she said.

"Some of that, I think, has gotten lost in all the focus on the specific outcome of BYU's investigation into the incident."

On Sept. 13, the West Coast Conference - a 10-school athletic conference of which BYU is a member – issued a state ment saying it believed BYU had con-ducted "a transparent and thorough in-vestigation." But the conference also added, "BYU's inability to locate perpetrator(s) does not mean the remarks were not said and does not mean BYU did not put the appropriate resources, time, and effort into their investigation." Gloria Nevarez, commissioner of the

WCC, compared the investigation to week, compared the investigation those involving sportsmanship or a bad officiating call "in that you rarely find the clean answer or the piece of video that unequivocally answers whether the call was right or not."

"I believe Rachel heard what she heard," Nevarez told USA TODAY Sports, "I also believe BYU conducted a thorough and transparent investigation and could not pinpoint perpetrator or perpetrators. And a lot of folks aren't of the mind that you can have both truths.

"So for me that's a starting place. And what guides me in working with BYU, I really did not feel they were trying to hide the ball. If I had sensed they were conflicted and maybe not doing enough conflicted and maybe not doing enough or trying to sweep it under the rug or not going far enough to in questioning witnesses or involving law enforcement, then I would have suggested an outside firm or additional outside review."

"I can't say what they investigated and what they didn't investigated; said Silvia Johnson, director of the Metro Volleyball Club in Washington, D.C., for which Richardson played for about six years.
