Overview

The Company currently known as Brown & Root started out as a small road construction and earth-moving company founded by the Brown brothers, George and Herman, in 1919. From these humble beginnings, we have evolved over our 105-year history to become one of the foremost design and construction resources in the United States.

In 1987, B&R was chosen to provide JOC and On-Call Construction (OCC)-type facility repairs for the US Army Corps of Engineers' first JOC program in Alaska. B&R then went on to hold the first non-federal JOC when Spring Branch School District in the Houston, Texas area developed its own JOC program.

B&R is now a leading innovator, designer, and construction manager of schools, research facilities, municipal facilities, office buildings, factories, stadiums, military bases, hospitals, drinking and wastewater facilities, roads, railways, tunnels, bridges, Petro-chem plants and pipelines. We have provided engineering design, construction management, operations and maintenance, logistics support, and renovation and repair support to an array of K-12, universities, city, county, state, federal, civilian, and commercial customers including numerous members of several regional and nationwide Cooperative JOCs. In short, we have a full range of consulting and performance capabilities to meet all of your specific needs.
